ULYSSES THE SILENT.

General Grant When He Was Sam Grant, of Galena.

From the Galena (Ill.) Democrat.

We are repeatedly called upon, in common with others of our fellow-citizens, by letters from different parts of the Union, for information in regard to the antecedents, moral, social and political, of Gen. U. S. Grant, or Gen. Samuel Ulysses Grant, according to a late newspaper writer, who says he derives the information from Sam's own father, who, if he knows anything, ought to know his own son's name.

Having no personal feeling against U. S. Grant, or S. U. Grant, we have consequently no objection to give an answer to these queries, and to state fairly all that is known or can be brought forward in regard to the political opinions of this gentleman. As to his social and moral status, we have little to say at present; but as to his politics we have excellent authority to whom we can refer for proof—that is, if General Grant had any fixed opinion while he resided in Galena.

U. S. Grant, or S. U. Grant, came to this city about nine years ago. His father was a resident of Covington, Kentucky, had a leather store here, and was engaged, through his two sons, Orrville and Simpson Grant, in the purchase of hides, which were shipped to Covington. Hither came Ulysses, after he wandered out of the United States army, and was employed as a kind of porter about the establishment. He was equally unknown to fame or to society here, and so remained until his good luck came in playing with that of the Black Republican dynasty of A. Lincoln.

It has been repeatedly stated that Grant voted for Douglas at the Presidential election of 1860, which resulted in the triumph of "Black Old Abe and the eternal negro!" Again, it has been said that both he and his brother voted for A. Lincoln. His brother did vote the Republican ticket, but Sam did not vote at all. He told one gentleman that, if he did vote, he would prefer to do so for Bell and Everett, the Know-nothing candidates.

To another gentleman he expressed his preference for Judge Douglas, adding, however, that he did not like to oppose the wishes of his father and brother, who were Republicans; thus exhibiting the same vacillating course in politics that he does at present. Know nothingness appears at all times to be his predominant political characteristic.

A few of our citizens knew U. S. or S. U. Grant during his residence here; and it was not until the title of General was attached to his name that they began to inquire: "Who and what is this General Grant who is announced as a distinguished citizen of Galena?" "We never knew him!" "What is his name?" "He does not know!" "Everybody seemed astonished to find that we had a Bourbon among us," and had ignorantly been nursing a military genius in our midst, who was destined (politically at least) to overwhelm all competitors.

It is generally understood that there is, and has been for some time past, in fact ever since General Grant, loomed up in the political horizon, quite a contest or rivalry as to the particular individual who first lent Grant a helping hand—both E. B. Washburne and Dick Yates claiming the merit of being his benefactor.

It appears that, on the breaking out of the rebellion U. S. or S. U. Grant (we had better call him Sam for short) wanted to Springfield, and obtained temporary employment as a clerk or peace adjutant in the office of that moral, sober and exemplary chief magistrate, Governor Richard Yates, then busily attempting to organize the militia of Illinois. It was here the first stroke of good luck occurred to him. A regiment was being organized, and Dick was about to appoint a certain A. B. Colonel thereof, against whom the officers of the embryo corps rebelled stoutly. "Who, then, shall I appoint?" said his Excellency. "Any body but a politician," responded the Captain and Lieutenants present. "There's Captain Grant; how will he do—he's a West Pointer?" says Dick (Sam was writing at a table in the room). "Content," answered the officers, and Grant was immediately commissioned by the Governor Colonel of the Twenty-first Illinois regiment, and who probably in that capacity, was the best appointment that Dick had made.

Ulysses Sam, or Sam Ulysses, after his singular accidental fortune in getting the regiment, had next to raise the funds to equip himself. His present admirers were not the men to assist him; they stood aloof, although many of them at the time were making money out of army contracts. He was poor; they were rich. His own family refused to aid him; and had it not been for the kindness of a gentleman who was a Democrat, and had been in business, he would not have been able to purchase his outfit.

Up to this time it is said that Sam Grant had never known E. B. Washburne, or Washburne known Sam, although some members of his family had politically stood by Washburne. The Congressmen had often passed and repassed the unknown hero in blessed ignorance of who and what he was.

When and where they found out us. So also others of our citizens, who now admire him, or even worship him, patronized him, or extended to him the right hand of fellowship until Washburne led the way, after he had been manufactured into a General, and then it was that he first deemed worthy of their distinguished consideration.

Such is a brief sketch of the Galena career of "Uncle Sam" Grant, as he was wont to be called by his comrades in the regular army. We have "naught extenuated or set down in malice." His good luck in things personal has adhered to him thus far. As we have before remarked, the very men who knew him, who never extended to him their hands in friendship, or their hospitality—who, or his family, or even visited him—who, in fact, while he was in the humble sam, did not know him, and the direction of play of his father, under him the cold shoulder—were now his most obsequious servants, and in conjunction with and at the nod of E. B. Washburne, purchased and furnished for him a house at the enormous expense of some six thousand dollars, making the whole country ring with their generosity. On the other

THE NATIONAL DEBT INCREASING, NOT DIMINISHING.

The national debt is steadily increasing, though some of the lying Radical money article writers occasionally endeavor to persuade their readers to the contrary. Figures, however, do not lie, if the Radical money-writers do, and even in the columns of a shoddy journal the truth occasionally will crop out, if only by mistake. Thus, we have a Washington correspondent of the Times telegraphing to the "Little Villain," in an out-of-the-way corner of his paper (where it would be least likely to be seen), that the debt statement for January will show an increase of fifteen millions of dollars; at the rate, that is, of one hundred and eighty millions per annum! Remember, the authority for this important announcement is not Copperhead, but genuine Republican; and so, reader, if any of the Loyal League stump speakers, or any of the Jacobin, canting newspapers should have the impudence to deny it, or to pooh-pooh it as a weak invention of the enemy, just remind them of the fact and shut them up on the spot.

We need not remind the laboring classes what this startling increase of the national debt really means. It will come home to them soon enough in the shape of increased taxation, with higher rents, dearer clothing and provisions, and the riveting of new links in the chains whereby the negro-worshippers have bound, and are binding, the white slaves of the North.

Again, we are told that the increase in visible chiefly in items of military expenditure. This shameful augmentation of the national burdens in a time of profound peace tells the whole story of radicalism in the Southern States. To maintain the military monarchies there, and the Freedmen's Bureau, and the negro-equality conventions, requires money, money, money; and as the money can only come out of the pockets of the Northern and Western tax-payers (the South having been "milked out" long ago), it is costly passed to the account of the public debt, which Northern men must shoulder, and to pay the "gold interest" on which Northern men must more than ever have their noses held to the grindstone by a heartless and soulless bondocracy.—Metropolitan Record.
